Your SLA Membership – What's In It For YOU??

Presented by SLA-SCC members David Cappoli and Debbie Hartzman

Tuesday, April 29

The Special Libraries Association provides many benefits for its members. In addition to the Annual Conference, it offers training, continuing education, and many resources to help members with their careers. Did you know that your SLA membership gives you access to one free course each month through Click University? Were you aware that SLA provides access to over a thousand online books in the Leadership and Knowledge Management eBraries?

2008 is SLA's Year for Innovation. Members will have access to an "Innovation Lab" that will provide a forum for experimenting with and discussing emerging technologies. Free training will be available to help members learn how to set up a wiki, create a blog, understand social networking and much more.

These technologies are tailor-made to help the SLA-SCC conquer traffic and geographic diversity to become an active community of ideas and shared experiences. This meeting will feature a tour of the Innovation Lab and will introduce the upcoming "23 Things in 15 Minutes a Day" program. This will help members implement and utilize these technologies at work and in their Chapters.

Join your cohorts in Pasadena and prepare to "go virtual"!

David Cappoli*, is current SLA-SCC President and the Digital Resources Librarian for the UCLA Department of Information Studies.

Debbie Hartzman*, is past chair of the Competitive Intelligence Division and a past president of the Southern California Chapter.
